Wit and Humor.

IT A henpecked husband residing in a small village in the interior, thus announces the departure of his dearly beloved from his "bed and board"—
"My wife, Ann Maria, has strayed or been stolen. Whoever returns her will get his head broke. As for trusting her, anybody can do so who sees fit—for, as I do not pay my own debts, it is not at all likely that I will lay awake of nights thinking about other people's."

IT A lady passing along the street one morning last week, noticed a little boy scattering salt upon the sidewalk, for the purpose of clearing off the ice.
"Well, I'm sure," said the lady, "this is real benevolence."
"No, it ain't, ma'am," replied the boy, "it's salt."

MODERN DEFINITIONS.—Maiden—Preserved sweet.
Children—A mother's history.
Bachelor—A social poacher on other people's Presences.
Widower—A liberated prisoner, who (if "well to do") the female police of society consider "wants looking after."
Widow—One who knows "what's what," and is desirous of further information on the same subject.—Yankee Blade.

CONGRATULATIONS.—Why are Cashmere shawls like deaf people? Because you cannot make them hear.
Why is a blade of grass like a note of hand?
Because it is mated by falling dew.
What kind of vice do some people, though ever so bad always shun? ADULT.
Why does the bell make less noise than the cook? Because one makes a din, but the other makes a dinner.
What time did the wind first whistle? "O'er the hills and far away." Why are real friends like ghosts? They are often heard of, but seldom seen.
When is a sailor like a corpse? When he is in the smocks.

Mrs. PARTINGTON.—"No, no," exclaimed the old lady, as she wiped her spectacles, scratched her head with one of her knitting needles, and heaved a sigh. "No, no, you girls now-a-days have half so much sense as we used to have in '76.
Why, when my old man first set to making his requests of me, you just oughter seed him!
One night narm and dad feeling kind o' sleepy, intired to their chambers to seek their rest and and begueting in totally that the young ones was about, tuck the taller too, and left us in the dark. Well, the fire blazed and blazed, and Hiram looked at me and I to him, until my heart beat as loud as Sank's tail, then, against the floor, when all at once he riz up and reproaching towards me with a beaming smile resting benignly on the ripples of his placid countenance, he tuck my hand and fell straight down on his knees. He impached me to except him, for all the world like the heroics of the yaller-kivered novelties. Oh, dear, but then was the blessed times." And the old lady teast the shadow from her brow, and recommenced plying her needles on her sock.

THE CONQUERED HUSBAND.—Years ago we read of the man who learned to say "our Nankens trousers." He was just married, and on the first Sabbath inquired of his gentle spouse, if he should wear his nankens trousers to meeting.
"Our Nankens trousers, husband," replied the gentle better half.
"Say our Nankens trousers," persisted the woman. And then and there they fell into a dispute about the ownership of the aforesaid article, the wife arguing that as they were married, everything was owned equally. The wife failing in the argument, snatched the broom and beat her husband until he escaped under the bed.
As meeting time came he thrust his doleful countenance from under the bed, and in piteous accents asked.
"Wife, may we wear our Nankens trousers to meeting, to-day?"
The man was conquered and the Nankens went to church.

GOOD TEMPER.

There's not a cheaper thing on earth, Nor yet one half so dear;
'Tis worth more than distinguished birth, Or thousands gained a year.
It lends the day a new delight;
'Tis virtue's firmest shield;
And adds more beauty to the night Than all the stars may yield.
It maketh poverty content; Tis truth's whispering peace;
It maketh grief from heaven sent For mortals to increase.
It meets you with a smile at morn;
It lulls you to repose;
A flower for peer and peasant born An everlasting rose.
A charm to banish grief away,
To snatch the brow from care; Turns tears to smiles, makes dullness gay—Spreads gladness everywhere;
And yet 'tis cheap as summer dew, That gossamer the lily's breast, A talisman for love, as true As ever man possessed.
As smiles the rainbow through the cloud, When threatening storms begin—As music 'mid the tempest loud, That still its sweet way wins—As springs an arch across the tide, Where waves conflicting foam, So comes this seraph to our side, This angel to our home.
What may this wondrous spirit be—
With power unheard before—This chain, this bright divinity?
Good temper—'tis the choicest gift That woman heavenward brings,
And can the poorest peasant kiss To bliss unknown to kings.

The Little Frock.

A common light-blue muslin frock Is hanging on the wall, But no one in the household now Can wear a dress so small.
The sleeves are both turned inside out,
And left of summer wear;
They seem to wait the owner's hands, Which, last year, hung them there.
'Twas at the children's festival Her Sunday dress was soiled;
You need not turn it from the light—
To me it is not spoiled!
A sad and pleasant thought Is to the spirit told,
By this dear little rumpled thing,
With dust in every fold.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JUDGE BRIDGES.

I have been acquainted with this distinguished and learned Jurist, about twenty years, and have been an eye-witness to many of his judicial acts from that to the present time. His district has always been one of the most wealthy and populous in the State; where many of the most distinguished and profound lawyers in the Commonwealth have been in constant attendance while his various courts were in session.
He was for many years Judge of the General Court at Frankfort, where he presided at each term over hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property; and in each and all of which many of the most difficult and intricate questions of law were presented and argued with the greatest ability by the numerous eminent members of the bar, who occasionally assembled from almost every part of the State.
It was in the General Court, that nearly all of the landed property of the country which was ever involved in legal investigation, had to be determined—it was in that court where many of the great questions of law that governed the rights of the laboring class of the community had to be settled, and to undergo the most accurate and minute examination.
While this enlightened and experienced Judge was presiding in the General Court, the great cases of Ray vs. Woods, and Daniel vs. Allison, (2 B. Monroe's Reports, from page 217 to 230 inclusive) was decided by him, and if he had never adjudicated on any other case, that was amply sufficient to distinguish him as a profound jurist and an honest independent man. That was a case involving many thousands acres of valuable land, which was sought to be recovered from the honest occupants by a blood-thirsty and heartless set of speculators, and had it not been for the superior legal learning as well as the firmness and independence of so eminent a Judge, every acre of that vast country of land would have been recovered, and numerous wealthy and respectable families turned out of their houses and homes.
It will be found by an examination of the case referred to, at page 229, that besides the distinction which he gave to the jury, he went on to explain to them the law in these words—"that they ought to take into consideration the solicitude which Kentucky and Virginia both felt, to pay the officers and soldiers of the revolution; also, that the entries were not made by the owners thereof, but by superintendents appointed for them, and that, when the entries were made, it was a wilderness country, inhabited by the savage."
It was no doubt this explanation of the law that saved the tenants in possession. There were great complaints made in regard to this matter by the counsel for the plaintiff; but the appellate court fully sustained the Circuit Judge in this decision of the law.

The questions which were presented in these cases, grew out of certain patents which had been issued on surveys, made by virtue of entries, for military services on the one hand, and on the other hand, certain individuals had entered the lands in contest under the laws of Kentucky, and in this way endeavored to overturn the military claims, and dispossess those who had bravely fought the battles of their country in their greatest perils, for the benefit of those who had made their calculations to reap the rewards of the just and faithful, by attempting to show that the patents did not correspond in all respects with their surveys which had been made in a wild and savage country, when it was impossible to have been as accurate as they otherwise would have been; but the fraudulent and wicked intentions of those greedy speculators were suddenly checked and forever silenced by the stern decision of the Judge who is the subject of these remarks.

I remember that some years ago, there was a change of venue granted in a most exciting criminal case, from the city of Louisville to the Mercer Circuit Court, where the Hon. John L. Bridges was then presiding. The papers being lodged in the Mercer office, and all things being ready, the parties appeared with Mr. Prentiss of Mississippi, and other eminent counsel to defend, and Mr. B. Hardin and others to prosecute.
Prentiss and Hardin were the great leading champions on each side. The case turned, to some extent, on several abstruse principles of law, after the whole subject had been debated with great ability on each side, the Judge in a clear, lucid and dignified manner, delivered his opinion, which in a great degree settled the case.
It was universally admitted on all hands to be correct, and was perfectly satisfactory to the leading counsel on both sides; and upon the return of Mr. Prentiss to his place of residence, and while in Louisville on his way, he was heard often to express his opinion, that Judge Bridges was decidedly the most clear-headed and able jurist he had ever seen in his life.

It has been universally admitted that in all the vexatious and complicated cases over which this venerable jurist has presided, that no member of the bar was ever known to get the better of him in any legal dispute that was sprung at the bar; but it is a singular fact, that in all such cases which have been of daily occurrence for many years, he has always come off victorious; nor has he in his whole life been turned and beaten about to suit the inclination or convenience of any living man; but in his whole judicial career he has at all times been competent to the multiplicity of business confided to his care without the control or dictation of any one.

Whether the questions presented were of a civil equitable or criminal character, whether the subject in litigation was the life, liberty or home and fireside of the litigant party, whether the most profound and eloquent, or the most ignorant and stupid lawyer was engaged in the matter under legal examination, was all the same with him; he has never been ensnared or entrapped by the one, or tempted to frown with contempt on the other, never wavering or faltering a moment when the legal horizon was blackened and shrouded in the most fearful clouds and mad rage of the more wealthy and powerful contending parties; never alarmed by threats or drawn from the plain and well defined principles of the law, by night and influence on the one side, or weakness and poverty on the other; but the more force and fury of the angry storm of the human passions, the more cool, calm and firm was this most worthy and venerable sage of the law; his long train of laborious and complicated judicial career, has no less been marked with distinction and great notoriety than with justice and profound wisdom; and this the records of the courts will show in long years to come; and as the ever rapid stream of time flows along in its deep and long channel, offering and obliterating the acts of many others who have been clothed with the same judicial robes; and to whose hands the same high trusts have been committed, but who have shamefully bowed down before the cunning, artful and fraudulent litigators of the day, and many of whom have committed so many depredations on the rights of the widows and orphans, and have committed so many judicial robberies on the just rights of men in all stations and conditions of life; then indeed will the true worth, the stern and spotless character of this worthy veteran of the laws of his country, constantly become more permanent, durable and brilliant, not like the tints of the rainbow merely flashing along the sky of Judicial proceedings to fade and vanish away.

May I here indulge in the fond hope that all those who now wear the bright robes of judicial honors which have so recently been conferred on them by the hands of the sovereign people of this Commonwealth, and all such as may hereafter be thus honored, or any of them, will peruse the course and walk in the footsteps of this praiseworthy and illustrious man.

When he was called by such an overwhelming majority of his countrymen under the new constitution, to preside over the district which has so recently been formed under the new order of things he cheerfully obeyed the voice of the people, not as an ignorant and selfish demagogue who is ever on the alert to seek and fill stations without the least pretensions to even merit or qualification, but merely desiring to have a name and empty honors and distinction; but in the spirit of a true patriot who is ever willing to devote a part of his time and attention to the real good of his country; and this has been proved by the works instead of the words of this venerable man, for every one must admit that the salary he has received is nothing like equivalent to the services he has rendered.

By the formation of the various Judicial districts under the new order of things, the counties of Garrard, Marion, Nelson and Anderson were thrown to Boyle and Mercer, which composed a part of his former district. When he reached the counties named, he found the chancery dockets crowded with business; many of the cases having been pending for more than twenty long years, and had remained there in such profound silence that the bundles had become almost decayed by time. They had slumbered so long that it seemed almost sacrilegious to trouble their silent resting places; they had remained as at first deposited until many of the parties to those much-esteemed records had removed to distant lands and abandoned all hope of ever seeing the names of the parties called within the walls of the Court Houses. Many others had been broken up and became insolvent while standing about in the Court Houses and streets, in the fond and vain and delusive hope that they might at some time have the pleasure of hearing their cases called by the Court; while many others again had mingled their frail bones with the dust of the grave, and had thus been severed from all the legal ties that had once bound them to those musty papers.

In this state of things, the distinguished and dignified individual referred to, having been called by his fellow-citizens to take the Judicial Chair, came forward to perform the many responsible and arduous duties imposed upon him, with the belief and repeated declarations of many of his most devoted friends that the task was too much and the labor too great to be performed by any one man under the sun.

But the moment this worthy veteran of the law received his commission and took the oath required by law, ever true to his trust and passionately fond of labor, he mounted his horse and moved forward with an energy and determination never surpassed even by the most ambitious general when leading on his army to a desperate attack upon the invading foe; he immediately hurried to those counties where the business had accumulated to such an alarming extent, and there amongst the stale and sleeping records commenced his work; he immediately brought forward the attorneys of the parties when they could be found and caused them forthwith to take the necessary steps to get the cases ready for trial and instead of sitting from hour to another through the whole term to hear the members of the bar disputing and contending about worthless and immaterial matters, and making long harangues upon mere notions, he made them do the work; and now the dockets of those courts are entirely freed from all such rubbish and trash; so that everything can move on in regular order. Thus has the business been accomplished to the satisfaction of all within the short time that this eminent individual has been presiding under his last appointment, and that, too, without unnecessary favors bestowed upon a few favorites at the bar or ruinous delays in the business.

There is no calculating the many advantages and blessings which are bestowed on the people in a district over which such a Judge is called to preside; nor is there any knowing of the many evils, curses and ruins, which are visited on a district over which an ignorant, ambitious and dictatorial Judge is called to preside.
The people should well consider into whose hands they confer this great power; it is all important to them to know whether a fool or a wise man should preside over them in a judicial capacity.

It has been well said by Solomon "that the words of a man's mouth are as deep waters, and the well spring of wisdom as the flowing brook," and "a fool's lips enter into contention, and his mouth calleth for strokes." Among all the officers who are clothed with power under our constitution and laws, there is none so important as that of the Judicial officer, and as a matter of course the very best and wisest men of the community should at all times be called upon to act in such important and dignified stations; besides the mental power and business habits of the honorable individual referred to, I find his physical powers are amply sufficient for the performance of all his duties, for he rides and moves about with the ease and facility of a boy of youth.

Within the last few months, I have heard much said in regard to this eminent and worthy sage of the law, and at the same time I have heard a unanimous expression of feeling that he should again be a candidate for re-election, and this sentiment is not merely confined to his own district, but is the feeling and sentiment of every one that I have heard express an opinion on the subject, and I do hope for the good of the country and the example of those who may follow after him in this honorable and responsible station, that he will consent to serve a second term.

A LAWYER.

Nonsuiting a Creditor.

There was a certain lawyer on the Cape, a long time ago, the only one in those "diggins" then, and for aught I know, at present. He was a man well to do in the world, and what was somewhat surprising in a limb of the law, was averse to litigation. One day a client came to him in a most terrible rage:
"Look here, 'Squire," said he, "that 'ere blased shoemaker down to Pigeon Cove, has gone and sued me for the money I owed him for a pair of boots."
"Did the boots suit you?"
"Oh, yes—I've got them on now—fast rate boots."
"Fair price?"
"Oh, yes."
"Then, you owe him the money honestly?"
"O' course."
"Well, why don't you pay him?"
"Why, 'cause the blasted snob went and sued me, and I want to keep him out of the money I kin."
"It will cost you something."
"I don't keer a cuss for that. How much money do you want, to begin with?"
"Oh, ten dollars will do."
"Is that all? Well, here is an X, so go ahead, and the client went out, well satisfied with the beginning.
Our lawyer next called on the shoemaker, and asked him what he meant by commencing legal proceedings against M.
"Why," said he, "I kept on sendin' to him till I got tired. I knowed he was able to pay, and I was 'termed to make him. That's the long and short of it."
"Well," said the lawyer, "he's always been a good customer to you, and I think you acted too hastily. There's a trifle to pay on account of your proceedings; but I think you had better take this five dollars and call it square."

"Sartin," 'Squire, if you say so, and darned glad to get it," was the answer.
So the lawyer forked over one V and kept the other. In a few days his client came along and asked how he was getting along with his case.
"Rapidly," replied the lawyer, "we've non-sued him, and he won't trouble you again."
"Jersidant! but that's great! I'd rather a gin fifty dollars than have him got the money for them boots."—Spirit of the Times.

VOTING FOR THE CONSTITUTION.—Some years ago, when the legislature of one of the middle States was framing the Constitution, the discussion of its various provisions was warm and obstinate. Many days had been spent in fierce debate, and the vote was about to be taken.
Just at the moment, a country member who had been absent some days previously, entered and took his seat. Another member who was in favor of the amended Constitution, went to him and endeavored to convert him.

"You must vote for the Constitution, by all means," said he.
"I'll think of it," said the country member.
"But you must make up your mind at once, man, for the vote is about to be taken."
The country member scratched his head and seemed puzzled.
"Come, why do you hesitate? Do you promise me now to vote for the Constitution? I am sure it will give you great satisfaction."
"I'll vote for it on one condition," said the country member.
"What is that?"
"And no other by gracious!"
"But what condition is that?"
"Why, that they will let it run through my farm!"

OUR GRANDFATHERS.—We once heard a vain, conceited chap, standing, with some fifteen or twenty other fellows, round the almost red-hot stove of a country store, one wintry night, say that we were much wiser now, in the present generation, than in generations gone by, in everything; and that all of us were wiser than those who had gone before us.

"Not all, I guess," said one of 'em, "for there's a good deal of difference in folks."
"Well," said he, "all that I know is, that my father knew more than my grandfather, and I know that I know more than my father did, for I've had a chance to see a great deal more than he did."

"Ha! ha! ha!" went all round the store.
"What are you laughing at?" said he.
"Nothing," said a red-haired, long-gaited young man; "I never known your father, but your grandfather must have been a natural fool according to your argument." They laughed heartily at first, but he looked so sheepish that they felt sorry for him, and he slipped out pretty soon.

Danville, Ky.,

FRIDAY—FEB. 3, 1854.

M. J. DURHAM, Esq.—

Sir: Knowing that there will be a vacancy in the office of County Judge at the ensuing August election, and having confidence in your industry, integrity, and ability to discharge the duties of said office, we, your fellow-citizens of the West end of Boyle County, earnestly and respectfully request you to become a candidate for said office.

MANY VOTERS.

PERRYVILLE, Jan. 27, 1854.

GRAND CONCERT.—The members of the "DANVILLE SAXHORN BAND," assisted by other musicians, intend favoring our citizens with a grand concert on Thursday evening next. We hope to see them greeted by what they merit—a crowded house. Their music will amply repay all who may patronize them.

DANVILLE SAXHORN BAND.—We stated some weeks since that a Saxhorn Band had been formed, in our city and was under the musical instruction of Mr. W. A. STIVERS, of Lexington. The rapid advancement thus far made by the members of the band in acquiring a practical knowledge of instrumental music, is exceedingly creditable both to themselves and their teacher, and must be gratifying to the lovers of good music in our midst. They complimented us with a serenade on Monday night last, and we believe we have never heard better music than they discoursed. This is saying a good deal—for we have listened to several fine bands, among others, the celebrated Arbogast's, of Louisville.

We take the present opportunity to return our thanks to the members of the band for the pleasure afforded us by their delightful music.

Our thanks are due W. C. Anderson, J. Q. A. King, and R. R. Bolling, Esq's, for Legislative favors.

Hon. Jas. S. Chrisman, Pres. Ewing and C. S. Hill, will accept our thanks for Congressional documents.

Hon. J. L. BRIDGES.—We publish on our first page an article copied from the Somerset Democrat in reference to this distinguished man—now, though verging on four-score years, riding as judge of our circuit, and transacting all the business connected with his arduous post, with more promptness and precision than, unfortunately, too many of his younger brethren of the bench. Age seems to have but little effect upon Judge Bridges. His hair has become silvered by time, it is true, and this shows that the weight of years is upon him, but his step is still elastic, his body unweakened, his voice trembles not, and above all, his mind is apparently as clear as when first he donned the lincin. No Judge in the State, we believe, transacts a greater amount of business, none can show cleaner dockets, and none have fewer of their judgments and decrees reversed by the Appellate Court. He combines with a thorough knowledge of law, an extraordinary memory, which enables him promptly to apply to every case the portion of law required. He may truly be said to have "folios at his finger's ends." May time and strength still be granted him, and may he preside over this circuit for many years to come!

COMMERCIAL.—No important changes have taken place in prices since our last—and we take this week our usual summary of the markets. Flour in Louisville commands from $7.25 to $7.50, and Wheat as high as $1.25 per bushel—the highest price paid for several years. Mess pork is selling at $11.75 to $12.50.

At New York, prices for best Flour ranged from $8.75 to $9.00; Cattle from 7½ to 10c, according to quality.

THE PROHIBITORY LAW IN THE LEGISLATURE.—On Thursday last, in the House, a memorial was presented from the Grand Division of Kentucky, Sons of Temperance, praying for the repeal of all laws authorizing a license for the sale of ardent spirits. The memorial was laid on the table by a vote of 45 to 42. The yeas and nays on the motion will be found in our report of legislative proceedings.

By reference to our reports of Legislative proceedings it will be seen that Drury W. Poor, Esq., Representative from Logan county, died at Frankfort on Tuesday last.

THE FRANKFORT CORRESPONDENT OF THE LOUISVILLE COURIER, in a recent letter, says that, in obedience to a recommendation in the Governor's Message, the committee on Agriculture and Commerce have prepared a bill providing for the annual expenditure of six thousand dollars in purchasing premiums as awards for improvements in stock, agricultural products and mechanic arts. They have apportioned the sum as follows: to the Southwestern Agricultural Association, of Louisville, $1000; to the Kentucky Agricultural Society at Lexington, $1000; to the Bourbon Association, $1000; to the Union Association, at Eminence, $1000; to the North Kentucky Association, at Maysville, $500; to the Green River Association, at Glasgow, $500; to the Kentucky Mechanics' Institute, at Louisville, and the Central Association, at Danville, $500 each. It is believed this is a fair apportionment of the fund, according to the age, position and prospective importance of the various associations.

The most recent despatches from Erie, show that the riotous spirit is as rampant as ever at that place.

The latest advices from Mexico state that great excitement prevailed at Chihuahua and Sonora in consequence of the new treaty with the United States, and the leading men there say they will annex themselves to the United States, rather than submit to the provisions of that treaty.

WHIG ORGANIZATION.—The Philadelphia News says that associations of Whig young men are being formed in different parts of the country for the reorganization of the party, and that a spirit of zeal and energy is reviving with the auspicious prospects of success in 1856. A "true Whig," suggests a general celebration of war for organization on the 22d of February next, the anniversary of the two great Whig facts, the birth of Washington and the battle of Buena Vista.

There is some complaint of the manner in which the Legislature disposed of the Memorial of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance in regard to a Prohibitory Liquor Law.—Laying a petition on the table is a rejection of it, and a rejection of it with contempt. We do not, ourselves, fully believe in the policy adopted by the Grand Division in regard to this matter—and though we are temperance men,—most ardently desiring to see a check put to the evils of intemperance, we seriously doubt whether or not a stringent prohibitory liquor law, anything like that adopted by Maine, would do the work in the most effective way. But notwithstanding this, we regard the men composing the said Grand Division, as being high-minded, patriotic citizens, anxious for the good of their fellows, and, (we blush to say it,) far more deserving of respect than a large number of the men to be found each session of our Legislature, occupying the seats of savans and lawmakers for our State. We do not say that the Legislature should have acceded to the request of the memorialists, unless the members could agree that such a course was best—but we do say, that the majority which voted to lay the petition on the table, acted in a manner deserving of censure. They should have acceded to the petitioners and their friends the show, if not the feeling of respect, and at least referred the memorial to a committee. They thought otherwise, however, and acted accordingly, and it remains to be seen whether the people of Kentucky will bear them out in their overbearing and tyrannical proceeding—in their endeavor, being conscious of their strength, "to crush the friends of Temperance in the Legislature and throughout the State, by one signal blow of contempt."

Our position on the subject of temperance is a very plain one, and we believe is occupied by a majority of the voters of the State. We would not desire to see a prohibitory law adopted by the Legislature and fastened upon the people—but we desire to see the people decide the question for themselves—if so be it, that the "wise men of Gotham," the mighty majority of the Legislative gentry at the capital, will give them a chance. We desire to see the question bro't before the people on its merits, fairly and squarely, without a mixture of any kind, and we believe that no man has just cause to object to and no legislator to refuse to pass a law submitting the question to the people.

KENTUCKY COLONIZATION SOCIETY.—This body held its annual meeting at Frankfort, on Thursday evening of last week. The meeting was addressed by Hon. W. B. Kinkead, of Covington, and Richard Apperson, Esq. The receipts of the society for the past year amounted to $7,442 70, of which $2,466 33 were to be given to servants of particular estates as their outfits.—The other expenditures amounted $5,021 62—paid for the passage of emigrants, six months' support in Liberia, &c. Two expeditions are to leave Kentucky during the present year—one in May and another in December. Thirty-eight have already applied to go with the May expedition and thirty with the December one.

The Society at its recent meeting elected Hon. Ben. Moore, President—and thirty-four Vice Presidents, among whom were Rev. Dr. R. J. Breckinridge, and J. A. Jacobs, Esq., of this place.

The friends of Colonization will regret to learn that Rev. A. M. Cowan, the efficient agent of the Kentucky Society, has resigned that post. His successor we believe has not yet been appointed.

The Senate has confirmed the appointment of Redfield, the Collector appointed for New York in place of Bronson, removed, by a vote of 35 yeas to 8 nays. The negatives were Senators Badger, Bell, Benjamin, Dixon, Dawson, Jones, Tombs, and Thompson of Kentucky. We are glad to see that the Senators from Kentucky had the independence to vote against the confirmation.

Maj. S. R. HOBBS, First Assistant Postmaster General, is lying hopelessly ill, of consumption, in Washington.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—We learn from the Louisville papers that Mr. Edward Slevin, of the firm of T. & E. Slevin, of that city, very mysteriously disappeared on Sunday night, the 22d ult. He was seen by several of his friends about 12 o'clock, at the Louisville Hotel, where he boarded, and left there in company with his friends, for the purpose, as was supposed, of proceeding to his place of business, where he slept; since which time, no trace of his person has been seen by any one known to be his friend.

His friends have offered a reward of $500 for the recovery of his body, and the river had been dragged with the hope of thereby fathoming the mystery; but without success.

Col. Benton declares that the Central part of the Rocky Mountains has territory enough to make a mountain State double the size of all the Swiss cantons, with everything as grand in scenery, and without the drawbacks of its avalanches, glaciers and cold.

COURT OF APPEALS.—The Court on Thursday last adjourned until Court in course, after a session of forty-six days. The following are among the causes decided by the court since those we last published:

Clemens vs Caldwell, decree, Mercer; affirmed. Jones vs Tennent, decree, Mercer; affirmed. Hughes vs Carson, decree, Lincoln; affirmed. Rout vs Price, decree, Garrard; reversed. Passmore vs Harris, judgment, Mercer; affirmed. Horine vs Moore, &c., judgment, Mercer; affirmed. Hieronimus vs Harris, judgment, Mercer; affirmed. Allen vs Shelby, judgment, Mercer; reversed. Batterson vs Kemp, judgment, Boyle; affirmed. Witherspoon vs Miller, judgment, Anderson; reversed. Vance vs Thompson, judgment, Mercer; writ of error dismissed. Price vs Sutton, decree, Polaski; reversed. Goode vs Alcorn, judgment, Lincoln; reversed. Rice vs Thompson, decree, Mercer; affirmed.

PROSPECT OF EUROPEAN WAR.—The New York Express gives the following as an "extract from a private letter of high authority":

"France will soon declare war against Russia. The Emperor is ripe for it, and is only restrained by prudential considerations, connected with England."

"Potomac," the Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Patriot, thinks there is no doubt of an impending slavery war in Congress on the Nebraska bill. He says:

We are to have the slavery agitation re-opened as a Presidential hobby. The country is again to be convulsed, and distracted, and shaken, from its centre to its extremities, to a greater and more perilous extent than it was in 1850, when the measures of pacification and compromise were introduced, debated, and ultimately passed, as a finality of the agitation of the slavery question.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Award of Premiums.—A portion of the premiums of the New York Crystal Palace exhibition have been awarded. The awards thus far show that the greatest number of silver medals fall to the United States.—France ranks second; Great Britain third; Germany fourth; other foreign countries one each. The Newport (Ky.) Silk Manufacturing Company received the first premium for manufacture of native silk; Miss Ellen Anderson, of Louisville, the first premium for patch-work quilt; and Miss Mary Ann Coleman, of the same city, special commendation in the same branch of needle work. Hayes & Craig, of Louisville, carry off the palm on hats. John J. Hunter, of Lexington, on American dressed hemp; and Robert Usher, of Louisville, on meats. Kentucky will receive the greatest number of prizes, in proportion to the amount and number of articles contributed by her citizens.

The New York Evening Post says of the awards:

The various awards have taken the form of silver and bronze medals—bronze medals, with 'special mention,' and 'honorable mention.'—The Crystal Palace Association have been liberal in silver, more liberal in bronze, and most liberal in 'honorable mention.'

There have been one hundred and sixteen silver medals awarded, of which the American exhibitors came in for the large share of eighty-one. The largest number of these medals has been bestowed upon the machinery, there being twenty-five, of which the Americans have received eight. In agricultural products and implements, naval architecture, textile fabrics, ladies' garments, shirts, &c., and India rubber materials, our country is triumphant, absorbing all the honors of the silver medals in those departments.

The bronze medals have been so liberally bestowed, and the 'honorable mention' so profusely uttered, that we should think that there are but few left, who, if unhonored with silver, have not either bronze or good word to solace themselves with.

We, of course, do not agree with the juries in all their decisions—for example, where Powers, the sculptor, is not thought worthy of silver, or even bronze, but comes off with the meagre allowance of 'honorable mention' for his Greek Slave and other works in marble, for which gracious favor our great American sculptor will doubtless, feel highly grateful.

SMALL POX.—The New Albany Ledger states that this terrible disease is horribly prevalent in some of the interior towns of Indiana, especially upon the line of the Madison and Jeffersonville railroad. Mr. Edwards, conductor of the Jeffersonville Railroad, has died of the disease. Several cases have occurred at New Castle, Henry county, in this State; and considerable alarm has existed.

SPLENDID PREMIUM FOR HANDSOME BABIES.—The Southern Central Agricultural Society has determined to hold its next annual meeting in Philadelphia. The Executive Committee have determined to award premiums for Babies, who are to be clothed in domestic fabrics, the premiums to be awarded under the direction of the Committee. Appended to the premium list of the Ladies' Department are the following: 1st Premium—Silver Pitcher, $50, for the handsomest and finest Babe, two years old. 2d Premium—Silver Pitcher, $25, for the handsomest and finest Babe, one year old. 3d Premium—Silver Goblet, $10, for the handsomest and finest Babe, six months old. We commend the above to the favorable attention of the officers of the Central Kentucky Association. They would no doubt confer a favor on the young married folks of this section by inserting a premium for the finest young Kentuckian in their next list of awards.

THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.—A Washington correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, under date of 26th inst., states that the Senate Committee, to whom the whole subject of a railroad across the continent has been referred, have had several meetings, but the continued absence of Gen. Rusk has prevented much progress. It is pretty well understood that the committee will decline to meddle with the question of the termini or line of the road, but will recommend the passage of a general railroad law, the donation of alternate sections of the public land to private companies, and liberal mail contracts, to take effect upon the completion of certain sections of the work.

COLD WEATHER.—On the 25th ult., the thermometer at towns within a few miles of Boston stood from 10 to 12 degrees below zero, and at Montreal, 25 below zero. This is pretty cool, but is not the worst. Despatches from Montpelier, Vt., state that the thermometer at that place on Sunday last, 29th, indicated 32 degrees below zero, and Monday not much warmer. The cold seems to have been very severe in all parts of the North, while in Kentucky on the same days we were enjoying delightful weather.

THE SLAVERY AGITATION AGAIN.—The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Herald states that the most intense excitement prevails at the capital among members of Congress with reference to the Nebraska bill. He says:

It is evident that we are fast approaching a similar state of feeling to that which existed in the winter of 1849—50. The Secessionists are marshaling their bands, and the Free-soilers are receiving daily additions to their forces. Mr. Dean, of N. Y., on Thursday, undertook to speak for the peculiar friends of the administration in his State, and declared they intended to support the Nebraska bill. Since then two thirds of the New York "Soft" delegation have openly denounced his assertion as untrue. The administration is using every exertion to restrain the storm, but their efforts are as futile as would be the attempt to dam up Niagara with a shingle.

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICTS.—Politicians are looking with no little anxiety to see what changes will be made by the Legislature in the Congressional Districts. On this subject, the Frankfort correspondent of the Louisville Courier writes as follows:

The Legislature of 1851-2 neglected a very important duty—that of apportioning the Congressional representation of Kentucky, according to the ratio of the last census. In consequence thereof, the two houses, the present session, have appointed committees charged with this business, and they will, in the course of a few weeks, make a report. Not less than a half dozen gentlemen, from various sections, having an eye on Washington, have been here volunteering their counsel in the arrangement of the Districts. From what I can learn there is no disposition to change the boundaries of but two or three of the present Districts, and these changes, if made, will be altogether with a view of equalizing the population and numerical force of the voters. The Xth District, represented by Col. Stanton, has become quite overgrown, and it is thought Mason should be taken off and added to the IXth, the latter, in the meanwhile, being divested of Morgan and Breathitt, two extraneous counties that sadly disturb the equilibrium. There is no feeling about the VIIth District, and I feel certain that no effort will be made to rob it of 'Sweet Owen.' It is Whig, despite the chimney that has lately diverted it from the good old path; and the time will come when the light of other days will be again ascendant. I know of no Whig that wishes any change, but the Democrats are eager for something of the sort, as they desire Major Breckinridge should be made a martyr, and then be apotheosized into the Gubernatorial chair. A trick this they can hardly effect.

By the proposed method of re-districting the State, there will be three Districts where the Democracy will have clear majorities, one (the present VIIIth), in which they can make a show of fight, and the other six, which will be for Whig occupancy. The key to the Democracy by inheritance of its soil, climate, people, &c. District is theirs, and one in ten. The remainder are Whig all of fair apportionment, and is it not, considering the relative strength of the parties?

TRIAL OF REV J. H. BROWN.
TESTIMONY of W. H. MOORE, Wholesale Book Seller, Cincinnati, and Elder in Doctor Rice's Church, in answer to page 10:
"Old almanacs and diaries are worthless, unless except for waste paper, and I cannot conceive how any mind of ordinary fairness could enter upon an invoice at cost. I can account for Mr. Goodloe's accepting the invoice of that stock, as made by Mr. Brown, only upon the hypothesis that Mr. Goodloe took the footing of the invoice, without minutely examining it in detail, trusting entirely to Mr.
Brown's integrity, and under the full belief that should any thing turn up that had a show of wrong about it, it would at once be corrected by Mr. Brown. Indeed, I am quite certain that Mr. G. made the purchase with these feelings, for he so expressed himself to me the first time I saw him, giving his first visit to Cincinnati, after the purchase was made of Mr. Fro.
The date of this visit of Mr. G. to Cinwas March, 1850."
